

Community College District Offers Expanded Online Summer Classes

Daily Business Report-June 4, 2018
Written by SD Metro Magazine

The first session begins today at City, Mesa, and Miramar colleges, and June 8 at Continuing Education.

Students looking to satisfy their general education requirements, boost their job skills, or explore a new interest will have plenty of options to choose from when the first of several summer sessions begins today at San Diego City, Mesa, and Miramar colleges.

Some 3,440 classes are available in all, and City, Mesa, and Miramar colleges are offering more sections online and more sections at night to make it more convenient for students to study. Miramar College, for example, has more than tripled the number of its evening class sections, and the number of online classes is up throughout the San Diego Community College District (SDCCD).

Classes range from an Introduction to Digital Photography course at City College to a History of the U.S., Black Perspectives course at Mesa College, and a Veterinary Microbiology and Immunology class at Miramar College. Online classes abound with a wide variety of selections that include classes such as Financial Accounting, Criminal Law, United States History from a Chicano Perspective, Mass Media in the Digital Age, Real Property Management, and Introduction to Child Psychology.

Free noncredit courses are also available at San Diego Continuing Education starting at various times throughout the summer months. Noncredit courses at Continuing Education range from Sewing Fundamentals to Computer Basics and Arts and Crafts for Older Adults.

The first session begins today at City, Mesa, and Miramar colleges, and June 8 at Continuing Education.

Students interested in signing up for classes can register online at <https://studentweb.sdccd.edu/reg-e/>